

Medical Director

Bio Products Laboratory

Attractive package

Herts

At its attractive rural site in Elstree, BPL manufactures therapeutic products derived from human blood plasma which it sells to the NHS and to customers in over 45 countries. The therapeutic products include immunoglobulins, coagulation factors and albumin. Committed to providing a continuous and competitive supply of quality products, product development is key to success in a growing global market. This is an exciting opportunity for a Medical Director to lead on medical and scientific issues and manage a team of committed and talented individuals. The Medical Director is a member of the BPL Executive and contributes to BPL management and strategy in addition to managing a group of 40 people.

The Opportunity

- Managing the medical department and product development, including immunoglobulin development, coagulation development, innovation and biosafety, scientific information services, clinical development, medical information and pharmacovigilance
- Championing BPL in the medical and scientific community. Provide medical input into regulatory affairs and clinical trials including strategy, planning and safety
- Keeping Executive Management team informed on current clinical and scientific regulations in Europe and USA to guide BPL on compliance in medical and scientific issues, and ensure good management of people in various disciplines and associated budgets

Your Credentials

- A physician with GMC registration who has good industry experience in pharmaceutical medicine, drug development, medical affairs and pharmacovigilance, and considerable knowledge of relevant regulations, codes and directive
- An excellent communicator and leader who can manage and inspire people in the teams involved inside and outside of the medical department and in external contact organisations including opinion leaders, trade associations and regulatory bodies
- There are many aspects to the job and candidates must have very good organisation and project management skills to ensure that important tasks are addressed
